

What's Developing

It seems strange to be writing this column. This particular one. It is the last What's Developing column in my career. Perhaps another writer will take it over in the future.

It began back in the Bonnie and Arlo days when the Eureka Community Development Company wanted a way to get more information out into the community about the things they were doing. Since that time, it has been a way to share economic development and community development news and to let residents know about resources available throughout the state.

I am resigning my position as Executive Director of ECDC effective at the end of December. That means that the board of directors will be seeking someone to fill the position. Those interested can talk to any of the board or leave an email at ecdc@valleytel.net. An official job opening and job description will be made available in the future.

Wanda Jundt